The theeting was awaited with the keenest interest throughout Er g and. It was summoned in the hope of smoothing the Unionist differences over the Government's Education bill, which have been accentuated by the embittered controversy in the press and pulpit and on the platform for months

There has been such a growth of opposition to Prime Minister Balfour's provisions of giving clerical nominees practical control on the committees which will henceforth manage the primary schools, replacing the present school boards, not only among Mr. Chamberlain's great folwas predicted that the Government might have to abandon the bill.

Mr. Chamberlain's reply promises that it will be a fight to a finish. His description of the alternative government is calculated and was doubtless intended to infurlate his opponents. He said that though he himself now and always favored schools, it was evident that the country was determined to have religious teachings in some form. The bill, therefore, must in is essentials pass.

If not, the present administration would bring in a government whose policy was that of separatists as regards Ireland, pro-Boers as regards South Africa, and Little Englanders throughout the world. Mr. Chamberlain added that he had been threatened many times, but he had not been made afraid, for the time was coming when the question whether or not he should continue in political life would be a matter of absolute indifference to him.

A large majority of those present at the meeting pledged themselves to support Mr. Chamberlain, and also to support amendments to the Education bill aiming to insure that public representatives should control the committee's management of the schools.

THE FRENCH COAL STRIKE.

Petition to Premier Combes to Bring Masters and Delegates Together.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. Paris, Oct. 9.- The strike movement has become general almost everywhere in the mining districts. The National Committee of the French Miners' Association held a meeting here to-day to discuss the situation. The delegates drew up a letter, copies of which they sent to the Coal Masters' Association and M. Combes, the Prime Minister, in which they declared that the strike which had begun could only end in victory for the men. The letter invites Premier Combes to bring he masters and delegates together for the purpose of settling their differences. In a letter to the president of the committee on French collieries the secretary of the National Miners' Union says: "The miners have quit the pits. It now depends on you alone to make their return sible by giving them satisfaction. We ask you to join us in pressing the question f salary and conditions and organization work in order to save both parties from the disastrous effects of a prolonged strike, Animated by sentiments of peace and concord, we hope that in your interests you will accede to our demands."

The summons for a general strike was only partially obeyed. In the Cransac and Allier districts all the workmen appeared as usual, despite the manifesto hat was placarded this morning, calling upon them to strike. On the other hand, work in the Pas de Calais district is at a standstill. The strikers here number 48,000 A few miners who went to work were not

A workmen's train was stopped near Bethune. Troops repulsed the strikers. Several strikers have been arrested for stabbing workmen.

The principle demands of the strikers are to obtain some kind of legislative scheme for old-age pensions, a legislative eighthour day and increased wages. Statistics show that there were 162,100 miners employed in France at the end of 1901, of which number only 60,000 belonged to the trade 814 to 10 daily.

HORSES FOR BRITISH ARMY. Report of a Commission on System Used During the Boer War.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, Oct. 9 .- A Parliamentary paper was issued this morning containing the report of the commission appointed to investigate the purchase of remounts for the army in South Africa during the war. The report says the system at home was the best and most economical ever sub jected to a practical trial and suited the conditions of the country. The system of reserve registered horses proved a decided success. The fact that riding horses had not met the necessities of the war was due to the change of type required in South Africa compared with previous wars. In regard to remounts purchased in Hungary, the report says the evidence left little doubt that the prices paid were too high. This was due to the monopoly in these animals held by one firm, which it was impossible to defeat. The report expresses regret that the offers of assistance in the purchase of horses made by the British military attaches at Washington and Vienna had not been accepted.

Subject to some reservations the system of purchase abroad had met the requirements of the public service, but it would have been less open to criticism if the remount department had shown a readiness to avail itself of outside assistance and had not relied exclusively on its own knowledge lowing in the industrial districts, but among and methods. With three exceptions, the regular rural Conservatives, that it the purchasing officers were suitable and competent men and the services they performed were good.

The commission finds that the unprece dented demands made upon the Inspector-General were met with extraordinary success. The number of horses despatched to South Africa was in excess of the demand. When horses were found to be purely secular teaching in public primary | deficient at the front it was not due to the failure of the remount department to land them at the coast in time, but to other demands on the railways and to the exigencies of war which compelled the issue of remounts before the horses were acclimatized or fit for work. This caused excessive wastage in the remount depart-

These sums will be taken from the appropriation of $30,000. The balance of the money will be distri buted by President Palma among those made destitute by the war.

BROCKSTEDT, WITH MURDER IN HIS HEART, KILLED HIMSELF.

Longshoreman, Belleving That He Had killed the Weman Whom He Had Won From Her Husband, Tries to Kill the Husband and Then Commits Suicide.

After vainly trying to kill Mrs. Hattie Adams of 81 Carmine street, with whom he was, as the police said, "in love," on Wednesday night, Henry Brockstedt, a longshoreman of 29% Dominick street, made a murderous assault on her husband vesterday afternoon.

Thinking that he had killed Adams, and believing that Mrs. Adams would die of her injuries, Brockstedt went home, took dose of carbolic acid and shot himself. When the police came up with him he was dead. Brockstedt formerly lived in Hoboken. where Adams, who is a plasterer, also on the second floor of the house in Car mine street Mrs. Adams is 34 years old. It appears that Brockstedt made diligent search for the Adams family after they left Hoboken. and two weeks ago located them. He then hired two furnished rooms in Dominick street and began sending notes to Mrs.

Mrs. Adams answered these notes, and, according to her 12-year old daughter, May, went to see Brockstedt in his rooms several times. On Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock Mrs. Adams went to the corner of West Broadway and Chambers street to keep an appointment with Brockstedt. After a few minutes spent in conversation the two walked in the direction of Hudson. the two walked in the direction of Hudson street. Near the corner of Reade street Brockstedt pulled out a revolver, placed it at the side of Mrs. Adams's head and fired. The woman pulled her head back and the bullet simply grazed her. Brockstedt didn't attempt to fire again, but returned the pistel to his pocket and walked to St. Vincent's Hospital with the woman, where

All day yesterday the police were trying to figure out who it was that shot Mrs.

Adams, but, as the woman wouldn't tell, they didn't make much headway. Yesterday morning Brockstedt called at the hospital and brought Mrs. Adams a box of candy. A nurse in the hospital overheard the two in conversation, and as Brockstedt was leaving she said to Mrs. Adams:

"That's the manthat shot you, isn't it?"
"Yes, he did it," said Mrs. Adams.
The nurse then went after Brockstedt and to frighten him told him that Mrs.

Adams would probably die. Brockstedt ran out of the hospital as fast as his legs would carry him, and the next heard of him was when he entered the Adams flat at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Adams, who had been working during the night and part of the morning, was in bed. Brockstedt said to him:

"Why did you shoot Hattie last night?"

"You did it, you scoundrel," said Adams. umping out of bed; "don't you dare say did it."

Brockstedt pulled out a pistol as Adams rushed at him and struck Adams several times in the face with it, breaking his nose. He then shot him in the back of the head and rushed out of the house. Three of Adams's five children witnessed

MASCAGNUS SECOND NIGHT. "Zanetto" and "Cavalleria! Rustleana"

Repeated at the Metropolitan.

Mr. Pietro Mascagni had an opportunity last evening at the Metropolitan Opera House of measuring the value of a New York first-night audience's size and vociferations. His opportunity arrived because was the second night of his series of representations of his own operas and because it was so different from the first night. On Wednesday night the auditorium was packed to the stretching point. All the orchestra seats and boxes were taken, every inch of standing room carried its weight of panting, suffocating humanity, and the superheated eyrie under the ceiling teemed with the children of prolific and exhaustless Italy. Cheers and applause followed the composer wherever he went n his own little realm of lyric drama, and flowers fell upon his pathway "thick as leaves in Vallombrosa."

Last night the double bill-"Zanetto" and "Cavalleria Rusticana"—was repeated. But what a chilling change! The orchestra showed gaping rows of empty seats and the double row of boxes showed a crescent with as many black spaces of emptiness as the toothless smile of old age. The upper circles were filled, however, and the gallery bore up bravely the standard of Italy. Taking it all in all, it looked like one of the topheavy Saturday night houses of the regular season when "Il Trovatore" or "Rigoletto" is sung. But there was plenty of enthusiasm, and the people looked as much as they desired at the back of Mascagni's head while he conducted and at smooth, smiling countenance when appeared on the stage to bow to the

The performance was better than that of the first night in respect of smoothness and certainty. The orchestra was less erratic and the chorus more confident. A second hearing of "Zanetto" only serves to confirm the impression made by the first. The little opera has grace, fluency, melody and declamatory aptness; but it is deficient in climax. It lacks point. It s a little dream, and its colors are seen as through a glass dimly. As a contrast to the pulsating music of "Cavalleria Rusticana" it serves well enough, and it evoked some applause last night. The same singers appeared in both operas as on the previous evening, and their interpretations call for no new comment. Elena Bianchini-Capelli, the soprano, is a welcome addition to our list of operatic acquaint-ances. Her voice is worn and her figure overgrown, but she knows the stage ad she has temperament. As for Mascagni, he conducts his own works admirably.

POLICE TO CHALLENGE VOTERS? New Call Upon Their Energies by Supt. McCullagh.

State Superintendent of Elections John McCullagh sent a letter yesterday to Deputy Police Commissioner Ebstein, asking for the assistance of the police in supervising the registration of voters. The instructions to the members of the police force contained in Supt. McCullagh's letter are somewhat unusual in that this year the police are asked to assist in the challenging of voters. After stating that challenge affidavits and lists of suspected persons would be furnished the police, the Superintendent says in his letter: I shall and do hereby require the police

I shall and do hereby require the police officers on duty in election districts specified in such lists to challenge, or cause the inspectors of election to challenge, any person who may attempt to register as a voter under any name mentioned in such lists. These lists are arranged by election districts for ready distribution to the police precincts affected. I have retained duplicate lists in order to check the registration books to see if these persons have been challenged. In former years no such request has been In former years no such request has been made of the police, but Deputy Superin-tendent Van Dusen said yesterday that it was made necessary this year because his force of deputies had been reduced almost a half through a reduction in the appropriation. Otsego County Democratic Nominations COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 9.-The Democrats of Otsego county placed the following ticket in nomination to-day: Member of Assembly, Eugene Carr of Unadilla; County Judge, Albert C. Tennant of Otsego; District Attorney, J. S. Waterman of Worcester; County Clerk, John C. Yer of Richfield; Sheriff, John A. Squires of Oneonta; County Treasurer, William Bronk of Otsego; Coroner, Dr. W. R. Zeber of Milford.

Merrill Will Stump for Gregg.

District Attorney Merrill of Queen county, to whom was refused a renomina tion on Wednesday, and who, it was said, might bolt the nomination of his former assistant, George A. Gregg, for the Dis-trict Attorneyship on the Democratic ticket, yesterday said that he would promise the votes of his following to the nominee and would take the stump for him. Mrs. Campbell came back with the statement that if the orchestra was not moved out of her stage hearing she'd appropriate part of the Garden tower for an electric sign to advertise Mrs. Pat. She made good the threat and made application for an electric sign on the north side of the Garden tower. The application is still under advisement, and Mr. Brady says that it will stay there.
